When we think of men, some think only of those with important careers like mechanics, pilots, dentists, businessmen and carpenters. But, perhaps the most important job for any man to have is being a father! While mothers are the nurturers and care-givers, responsible for bringing their children into the world, fathers play a highly important role, too; one that should never be over-looked. In this short story, our young child learns just how much effort their Dad put towards preparing for fatherhood. It can be quite surprising for some to learn just how much a Dad needs to do to provide only the best for their little ones! This uplifting tale with colorful illustrations, aimed at children aged five to nine, is a great way for parents to introduce the idea of fatherhood to their children, helping them to understand that although Moms are often number one, Dads also have a big responsibility in holding their families together!
